WEDNESDAY, MAY 4, 1891.

WALLACE GRIFFITH, JR., EDITOR.

Rate is an invariable cash-on-hand.

Asbestos is best on the paper inked.

A cheap but legal beverage—strong royal tea.

The adlar is the mathematician of reptiles.

The terminus of the federal senate is a Mammoth's Hoar.

Dearest trimmings is the present fashionable animal of women.

Garfield wears a shawl hat, but Cookling's headgear is a corked heater.

From the frequency of his threeshings, all of Mrs. Deering's patrons must be childless subscribers.

When cooking can be done over face, the Keweenaw and perpetual motion will be perfected.

The concealed luxury of his whippers fully compensates Senator Barnard for his lack of brains.

Davin was the first person that used a slingshot, and Glishish the first to wear a hang on the forehead.

Presumptuous General Javis, in kicking the first nut out of his department, has presented Braly's hither for his party.

A medical record before an opera with the query, "What is the first impression to mothers?" We should say husbands.

The Boston Globe says, "Kissing is becoming fashionable, and therefore proper." It has always been fashionable and proper with us.

"Don't trouble yourself about the details of your business," No, don't. You have plenty of neighbors who will attend to them for you.

The contemplation of the aftermath of Hawley's administration is enough to turn the political stomach of any honest man in the republican party.

Confidence and John D. White imagine themselves the upper and nether stones in the mill of the gods, and consider Garfield as their particular grist.

Devin always came to grief whenever he needed the confederates. Of course he spently went to grass when he backed up to Joe Brown the other day.

The Congress of Michigan has opened its mouth and has entered the senate. Has unadvised promulgation paralyzed the wriggle of the reptile's tongue?

McAvlin is no longer a merry hand to Postmaster Tied of Baltimore, since a jury awarded him $3,000 in damages for assault on a city of his pretty female clerk.

Mr. Anderson is the Venus of the dramatic firmament, and Barry Mitchell is the Luna. When these two planets come into conjunction look out for theatrical calamity.

It is a goodly tribe who call on a dog. It is equally judicious to call on a cat. We do feel a little alone like a bulldog shaking a stray cat when we get hold of a sheet like the Tribune.

Get it right, boys. Joe Blackbirds don't kick "Guth" Townsend, of the Cincinnati Enquirer. He never clapped his leg-jaws, being too weak from illness to exercise his leg.

Post developments now transpiring at Washington, it really begins to look as if Hawley's alleged immediate administration was a veritable white saprophyte, full of the house of corruption.

Myrtle Means has impressed the Sunday theatre and her garden show at Cincinnati. It is possible that the good people of Louisville can not spare up a new like Means as all their kindred.

A writer in a popular magazine wastes twelve mortal pages in answering the question, "What shall we do with our girls?" He can be satisfactorily answered with five words—hate 'em and kiss 'em.

There is a shouting-brawl in New York city called the Church of Heavenly Rest. Incompetency of temper between the pastor and trustee, however, has not been converted into the Church of Hume's Nest.

Wow-wo-wo! (Buck-horn!) John D. White, the Wild West Boss of the Montana, solemnly swears that he will never, never, NEVER set foot into the White House so long as Garfield is its incumbent, sleeping!

Mrs. Cox, the famous lawyer, who applied to the president for the Brazilian mission, mourned him that she "fired his yellow fever, carriage, was not from him." She mourned his disease, however, about the terrible man.

The fellow who advises people to "give Sara Bernhardt a wide berth" is decidedly off. She can sleep on the edge of a knife, and have plenty of room to turn over without falling off the bed. It's David Davis who requires the wide berth.

"Guth" Townsend denies the truth of an alleged interview that appeared in a recent issue of the New Orleans Times. Unfortunately, his reputation as a professional liar is so firmly established nobody but a Cincinnati Enquirer believes a word he says.

The statement of the Louisville Commercial that this country never produced but two men—George Washington and John Kelly—who could wear that they never saw a woman, although John Kelly has an opportunity to tell another brilliant lie.

The South Kensington, commenting on the marriage of Mr. W. H. Lyon to Miss Lizzie Lamb, says the time has come when the lion and lamb shall lie down together. It could have added, and after awhile the little child shall lead them if they have luck.

JAMES T. FIELDS.

This well known Boston editor, publisher, author and lecturer, died at his home in that city on the evening of the 21st ult.

James Thomas Fields was born at Portsmouth, N. H. December 31, 1817, and attended his education in the high school of his native town. His father was a sea captain, who died about the time the subject of this sketch had attained his fourth year. James greatly distinguished himself at school, taking several prizes for Greek and Latin compositions before attaining his twelfth year, and at the age of thirteen arrested the attention of the late Hon. Levi Woodbury, then governor of the state, by an English poem in blank verse. Governor Woodbury advised him by all means to continue his studies at Harvard, but his mother was peculiarly unable to send him to college.

In 1841 he made his advent in Boston, and obtained a clerkship in the bookstore of Oliver A. Houder, which became the scene of his subsequent business career. He soon became associated with a number of other brilliant youths, among whom were Edwin P. Whipple, Daniel N. Haskell (the late editor of the Boston Transcript), Elliott C. Cowley, and Thomas R. Gould, afterwards an eminent sculptor. Young Fields soon gained a high reputation among his acquaintances by his poetical productions, his seemingly exhaustive acquaintance with English literature, and his excellent critical faculty. In 1846 he delivered the anniversary paper before the Boston Mercantile Library Association, Edward Everett being the orator for the occasion.

The firm of Carter & Hendee, by whom Fields was employed, sold out to Messrs. Allen & Ticknor, and subsequently Mr. Wm. D. Ticknor purchased Allen's interest and became the sole proprietor. In a short while Mr. Ticknor induced Fields and a fellow clerk named Lowell to enter into the business, and the firm name became Ticknor, Reed & Fields. Some years later Reed withdrew and the firm became Ticknor & Fields, a firm that was widely known throughout the world of letters for the uniformly high character of its publications. They were for many years the sole publishers of the writings of Emerson, Lowell, Whittier, Henry W. Lowell, and many other New England poets, and from their presses Hawthorne, Thoreau and Whipple were first introduced to the reading world.

But Mr. Fields made his reputation as a writer distinct from his honorable reputation as a discriminating and enterprising publisher. In 1848, before the Mercantile Library Association—Daniel Webster being the orator—he read his new work known as, "The Poet of Home." In the succeeding year he printed a small volume of his poetry for private circulation among his friends. In 1849 he made the tour of Europe for the first time, visiting England, Scotland, France and Germany. While in Great Britain he formed the acquaintance of Wordsworth, Lowell, Mayhew, Mayhew, Landier, Talford and Rogers, becoming particularly intimate with the latter, then greatly advanced in years. On returning to his native land from this visit he was warmly received, and the coast of Newfoundland.

He was again in Europe in 1851-2; spent the winter chiefly in Rome, was at Paris during the coup d'etat of December 2, 1851; was intimate at Rome, London, Paris, Quincy and "Old North." Was chosen a member of several clubs and learned societies, and was treated as a corporation director in London, on which occasion he made a happy response. In 1851 Mr. Fields privately printed another number of verses, and in 1852 another entitled "A Few Verses from a Poet's Note-Book." In 1853 he was a member of the American Academy of Arts and Letters in 1853, and added to his gallery of personal friends several distinguished authors whose works his firm published in America. At this time, or earlier, he developed the friendship of Tennyson, Robert Browning, Charles Reade, Thackeray, Bulwer and Harriet Martineau. In America he was constantly intimate with Bryant, Peck, and H. D. Dana, Everett, Agassiz, Webster and, in fact, with nearly all the best known authors and public men. Many anecdotes are told illustrating his marvellous knowledge of the scientific and literary authors, many of whom were introduced to him for their first introduction to public life. He is said to have been instrumental by judicious encouragement in the production of Hawthorne's "Mosses from an Old Manse." "The Scarlet Letter," which established the reputation of that modest and retiring man of letters. When the Atlantic Monthly took the hands of his firm Mr. Fields lost the greatest friend and honor of the state government of Virginia, with his additional claims upon republican support—he did not lose any credit to the Union, while Massachusetts has never cast a democratic vote, while Massachusetts never cast a republican one.

The Washington Republican editorially declares that an alliance offensive and defensive has been entered into between J. T. Fields and President Garfield, the purpose of which is to throw dirt upon the administration of Hayes. Unfortunately for the republic, the proprietor of the Republican has been so far from recognizing the personal friendship of James Fields that he has kicked out of office the editor for failing his official position to swell the government through the Star Route conspiracy.

The Washington correspondent is a queer lot. We pick up the New York Herald, and read that its correspondent has learned from an entirely trustworthy source that Robertson's nomination will certainly be rejected, which accounts for the announcement that Garfield is Conkling's eyes. We then open the World to discover that its correspondent has received assurances from an entirely reliable source that Robertson's nomination will certainly be confirmed, which accounts for the April 1st that Garfield is Conkling's eyes.

We assure Bro. Walton, of the Interior Journal, that the News is mailed to him regularly each week, and we can not account for its non-arrival. Many thanks for its regularity, which we will endeavor to merit by showing our appreciation of it.

The attitude of neutrality between the warring republican factions in the federal senate assumed by the democratic majority, stands out prominently for its candor and honesty and the transaction of pending and pressing public business, is most honorable to themselves and satisfactory to the country. Let them weary on in maintaining

MISS KIVA KINNEY's paper, the Ellis Herald, is at hand, and we heartily congratulate the ancient and honorable confederacy of editors upon this charming occasion in their ranks. She manifests decided aptitude for newspaper work, and writes smoothly, intelligently and entertainingly. In the language of the candidate: "Here's my hand, and here's my heart, Until death or death part."

A Loving Joke.

Death of Mr. Edward A. Stewart, Editor Breckenridge News: Mr. Stewart was born in the state of Maryland, in the year 1840, and consequently was 51 years old at the date of his death, which occurred Thursday, April 21, 1891. Deceased came to Louisville, Ky., in 1868, and resided for about two or three years, when he became engaged to and married Miss Mary Ann Stewart, who resided near Concord, Meade county, Ky., where he subsequently purchased a farm and resided until his death. His first wife died June 13, 1867, and in 1868 he married Miss Mary Ann Stewart, who lived near Harlanburg, Breckenridge county. She died in the year 1880, and he was subsequently married to Miss Sallie who was his second wife. Mr. Stewart was the father of 15 children, 32 grandchildren, 9 great-grandchildren, and 4 great-granddaughters. He was a member of the Catholic church, and had the consolation of receiving the sacrament of his church a few hours before his death. Deceased was remarkable not only for his literary attainments, but for his mental and physical facilities until attacked with pneumonia nine days before his death. He was especially remarkable and active as a violinist, in which profession he seldom met an equal and never a superior. He was naturally of a happy disposition, was the friend of every man, and consequently had no enemies. Though dead to this world, he will live in the memory and hearts of a large circle of friends, who truly and sincerely sympathize with the family in their bereavement.

BURAS.

If the number remains favorable this time, we will be able to give you a good lot of good through planting corn.

We have fine prospects for a splendid crop of corn for the neighborhood. We have plenty of tobacco plants, and they are growing fine. If missing happens from this on to the plants, and we have reasonable assurance, there will be a very large crop planned.

Charles Day and Miss Cramer skipped out night before last, and went somewhere to get married without any body "asking them to."

Mr. H. H. H. has offered to give a new to any boy who will show him, in the New or Old Testament, where Christ commanded.

Many thanks for the first day of the year, as a day of rest or Sabbath, or where life, or any of his followers, ever kept it this holy day. No person has yet gained the reward.

My dear Mr. H. has received a full stock of goods, and offers them cheap for cash.

CLIFTON MILLS.

Spring, beautiful spring, has come at last. This morning is over all. In this section of the country, and after planting time has set in, the farmers will turn their whole attention to the business for some days.

Business has been quite dull in our vicinity up to the present, but there is a bright prospect for a lively business for some days.

Raising White Hair tobacco is all the talk among the farmers in this neighborhood.

Black Adkinson has opened out a new stock of goods at Clifton Mills. Come, every body, and buy a new outfit.

J. C. W. and T. B. say they are going to outcrop Brackenridge county this spring.

W. H. says about his wife as if it would make a father this season and, to be sure, for a few days, he is going to plant two rows of White Hair tobacco.

W. H. says he will never throw another nut on the store where there are young ladies present, for the way they do run and "how-wee."

J. S. says he has got the sharpest dogs in Kentucky. They have been slipping into the store where there are young ladies present, for the way they do run and "how-wee."

Special Card.

The above prices will be found lower than elsewhere in this country, considering that every article is STRICTLY FIRST-CLASS, and every instrument goes fully warranted. I have a Special Department for filling country orders, and the same careful attention will be given to the smallest piece of music as to the most costly Clinkering Piano, and my immense stock embraces EVERY thing pertaining to music.
